

Abstract:

Despite ultrasound-guided peripheral intravenous catheter insertion being a well-established method for patients with difficult intravenous access, currently there are limited hospital-based training programmes. We describe the training programme that was established in our hospital over 5 years ago and how it can be replicated in other centres.

Reference:

Archer-Jones A, Snelling PJ, Watkins S. Establishing a hospital-based ultrasound-guided peripheral intravenous catheter training programme: A narrative of a 5-year experience. Emerg Med Australas. 2020 Oct 3. doi: 10.1111/1742-6723.13648. Epub ahead of print. PMID: 33012110.